6:47 a.m., Kiato. Uncle Babis, the finest souvlaki man in Piraeus, needs Grandma's secret spice before the judge of the "Golden Skewer" arrives at noon. The train is cancelled (a goat on the line) and the only taxi driver in town is Babis himself. So you run: along the electric railway, from the city avenue to the pine forest, all the way to Piraeus. The ticket inspector is after you. So is the goat.
